

Registration for the Spring European Hepatitis-HIV Testing Week pilot is now open!

What is the Spring European Hepatitis-HIV Testing Week pilot?

This pilot serves as another opportunity during the year to promote testing and increase awareness of knowing one's hepatitis/HIV status. Through this pilot, there will be a focus on integrated testing activities for hepatitis and HIV with the aim of creating a better understanding of how we can improve integrated testing and address barriers in implementation. This pilot will also allow ETW stakeholders to assess interest and the feasibility of having more than one Testing Week during the year.

When is it?

The Spring European Hepatitis-HIV Testing Week pilot is from 18 - 25 May 2018.

We are asking all who decide to participate in the pilot to monitor their testing activities from 1 May to 8 June to assess the impact of the pilot activities.

Who can participate?

All interested organisations, at the local and national level, can sign up to participate.

How can you get involved?

Registration to participate in the pilot opens today! Sign up on the ETW website here.

There are many activities that you and your organisation can do for the Spring Testing Week pilot. They can include activities such as:

- Awareness raising activities for key populations at higher risk
- Hepatitis and/or HIV testing outreach activities for key populations
- Promotion of combined testing at your site, on social media and much more

Your participation would also mean closely monitoring and evaluating your Spring ETW pilot activities. We will rely on your feedback during the post-Spring ETW pilot evaluation.

Your participation in this pilot activity will be a great way to increase knowledge on the outcomes and barriers for combined integrated testing and hopefully, help us improve testing strategies
